DISCOVER LOS TAJILLOS

A landscape shaped by time

I stand at the southern edge of the Guadalquivir countryside, a threshold between hills and plains, where the horizon opens and folds back upon itself. I have been slowly shaped by the ceaseless dialogue between nature and human presence, which has left lasting marks upon me. Water, stone, soil, and climate have sculpted my form, while paths, crops, trades, and ways of life have inscribed a continuous history upon my surface.

I reveal myself as a living system, where geology, biodiversity, and culture intertwine seamlessly. I am not a static landscape, but a territory in constant transformation, ready to be read, felt, and explored. Within me remains the profound imprint of all that has touched and shaped me.
